David Haberman is Head of Student Services and Attorney Services at the Thormodsgard Law Library at the UND School of Law. He also contributes to the development and maintenance of the Law School and Law Library websites. Each spring semester he teaches Intro to Law and Legal Studies, which is an introductory course covering a variety of topics related to the American legal system. The class is offered to a mixture of students - UND undergraduate students interested in the study of law and students attending the UND Law School as part of the international exchange program with the University of Oslo Law School. Haberman attended UND, receiving a B.A. in Psychology in 1981 and a J.D. in 1984 from the School of Law. Prior to his current position Haberman practiced law in North Dakota and Minnesota - after law school in the Wahpeton area in general practice and later in the Grand Forks area as a public defender in Northwest Minnesota.

William P. Johnson is an Assistant Professor of Law at the UND School of Law, where he teaches in the areas of contracts, commercial law, and international business transactions. He completed his B.A. in German and Russian at the University of Minnesota and his J.D. at the University of Michigan Law School. While in law school, Professor Johnson spent one semester studying international and comparative law at Universiteit Leiden in the Netherlands. Following law school, Professor Johnson completed a judicial clerkship with the Honorable Justice Russell A. Anderson of the MN Supreme Court. Upon completion he entered private practice with the firm of Foley & Lardner LLP, where he spent six years practicing business law, focusing on commercial matters, international business transactions, and international product distribution. A highlight of his practice experience involved serving as lead U.S. counsel to the supplier for a large hydroelectric power project in Guatemala, a project that was recognized by LatinFinance Magazine as "Best Power/Energy Deal 2007" and by Project Finance Magazine as "Latin American Renewables Deal of the Year 2007". His research and writing have focused on the intersection between international human rights obligations and U.S. constitutional law. He has also recently written and presented on the relationship between international distribution systems and local competition law.

Professor Eric E. Johnson received his J.D., cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 2000, where he was a member of the Board of Student Advisers and an instructor in legal reasoning and argument. He received his B.A. with highest honors and special honors from the Plan II program at the University of Texas at Austin in 1994. After law school, Professor Johnson was an associate in the litigation and intellectual-property litigation practices at Irell & Manella in Los Angeles, where his clients included Paramount, MTV, CBS, Touchstone, Immersion Corporation, and the bankruptcy estate of eToys.com. At Irell, Johnson's matters included claims of patent infringement in the video-game industry, copyright infringement of a television series, breach of a motion-picture director's contract, and breach of a profit-participation clause in a television executive-producer's contract. At UND, Professor Johnson's courses include Torts, Entertainment Law, Sports Law, and electives relating to intellectual property. His primary scholarship interests are intellectual property and entertainment law. Before joining the UND faculty, Johnson taught as an adjunct professor at Whittier Law School and Pepperdine University School of Law, teaching Patent Law, Trademarks, and Entertainment Law.

Professor Joshua Fershee received his J.D. magna cum laude from Tulane Law School, where he was elected Order of the Coif and editor in chief of the Tulane Law Review. He is also a graduate of Michigan State University, where he received a B.A. in Social Science, with a focus on economics, psychology, and sociology. Before joining the UND School of Law faculty, he served as a visiting professor of law at Penn State University's Dickinson School of Law in State College, PA. Professor Fershee began his legal career with Davis Polk & Wardwell, New York, NY, where he represented clients in corporate and litigation matters including mergers and acquisitions, derivatives transactions, and securities regulation. He then joined the energy practice group at Hogan & Hartson, LLP, Washington, D.C. Professor Fershee writes and lectures on business associations, corporate law and governance, energy law and policy, climate change and environmental policy, agricultural law, labor and employment law, law and economics, Native American law, and sports and entertainment law.
